baby2mom Egg Donation and Surrogacy Programme Areas of Coverage:

Egg Donation Confidentiality:

Egg donation South Africa means confidential egg donation. This means that recipients of donor eggs become the legal parents and no one else is aware of the egg donors for the recipients. Only baby2mom Egg Donation Agency and the fertility clinic, so it is entirely your prerogative and your decision about discussing the assistance of an egg donor with any one else.

Egg Donors:

baby2mom, being proud of thoroughly screened egg donors, is interested in optimising your chances of conceiving via donor eggs.

All egg donors undergo an extensive screening process:

- An initial screening by baby2mom egg donation agency
- A further screening on a social or psychological level
- Medical screening in the form of relevant blood test - day 2 or 3 of egg donor's cycle (period). Thyroid function, ovary function, blood group (if unknown), HIV and Hepatitis B
- Final medical screening via an internal scan and assessment of all screening results by the fertility specialist.

Segregation of duties exists amongst these roles to optimise the process and ensure egg donors are giving recipients the very best chance of conception by donor eggs.

Continuing with professionalism and dedication, egg donor information is made available to the extent that egg donors have agreed to provide such information.

Number of Embryos To Transfer:

Normally two embryos are transferred with an egg donor programme. This optimises the chances for a donor egg pregnancy and a safe one at that. In some instances, three embryos are transferred, with the written consent of recipient and in consultation with the fertility specialist. We do not want to compromise your health or that of the baby/ babies.

Treatment from Outside of Johannesburg:

We have optimised the egg donation process to make it is easy as possible for recipients looking for donor eggs – easy egg donation.

Once all medicals have been confirmed, if recipients of donor eggs still have a cycle, this will be synchronised to the confirmed egg donor's cycle. This can happen whilst you are still in your home town. A prescription will be sent to you with egg donation guidelines as to how and what to do. We will also advise exactly when you need to be in Johannesburg for your treatment. This process is applicable if you are within South African borders or any where else in the world.

Time in South Africa for Egg Donation:

You will need to have a final scan on day 10 – definitely no later than day 12. Egg retrieval is normally around day 14, so recipients of donor eggs will need to ensure that sperm is available on the day of egg retrieval to fertilise the eggs. The embryo transfer is normally done on day 5 or day 6 post egg retrieval.

So in a nutshell, you will need to be available from around day 10 to 5 days post day 14 – around 10 days.

Required Medicals to Confirm Your Readiness to Become Pregnant:

To optimise the process for egg donation, woman as recipients of donor eggs should have necessary medical tests.

Men, whose sperm will be fertilising the eggs, should also have specific tests done.

Egg Donation Success Rate:

The success of an egg donation program is dependent on variables, including the egg quality, sperm quality and readiness of uterus to accept a pregnancy. In proceeding with egg donation treatment, please note that we attempt to improve and optimise these factors, but there will always be variables which impact on egg donation success. What is important is to optimise your own chance and improve your own egg donation success. Other patients who insist on proceeding with their own sperm or uterus, despite the odds provided that this will adversely impact their success – is an independent issue to your own.

Having said this, considering all the human variables, baby2mom Egg Donation and Surrogacy Programme has a success rate of about 48%. This ratio is considered quite normal and if any other egg donation agency or egg donor clinic quotes higher stats, consider additional information first – e.g. number of embryos transferred.
